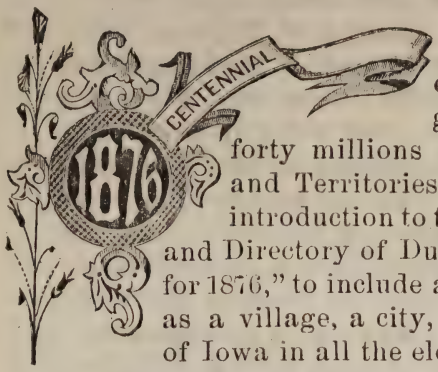
ITS HISTORY—PERMANENT SETTLEMENT—PROGRESS—CHURCHES—SCHOOLS—SOCIETIES—COMMERCE—MANUFACTURES—RAILROADS—GENERAL BUSINESS AND PROSPECTS.



IN this Centennial year of our nation, with its grand celebrations by over forty millions of people in forty States and Territories, it seems proper, in the introduction to the "Centennial Gazetteer and Directory of Dubuque City and County, for 1876," to include a brief sketch of Dubuque as a village, a city, and now, the metropolis of Iowa in all the elements that make a good city the glory of a great State.

It was not until 1803 that the region west of the Mississippi river became a part of the public domain of the United States, by purchase from the government of France. While it was previously a Spanish province a well educated young French-Canadian trader named Julien Dubuque, obtained from the Indians, in 1788, the privilege to work lead mines in what is now parts of three townships and including the eleven square miles within the present city limits.

In 1806 Dubuque and his associate claimants sought to have their rights established as a "Spanish grant," on the ground that the Governor of the province of Louisana had confirmed, in 1796, the Indian permission given eight years before. Dubuque died in 1810, but his heirs at law continued their claim, and the celebrated "Dubuque claim case" was legislated upon in Congress, and litigated in the courts nearly fifty years, and was not finally settled, adversely to the claimants, until 1853. The associates and followers of Dubuque continued to work the mines, in peace with the Indians, until about 1830, some years after a permanent settlement had been made in the adjacent State of Illinois, at Galena, and in the then unorganized Territory, now the State of Wisconsin, at Sinsinawa Mound, about six miles from Dubuque.

The Black Hawk war, which closed in the summer of 1832, resulted in a treaty by which the Indian title was extinguished to the eastern part of what is now Iowa. The first permanent settlement was made in the fall of that year by a few men, some with their families, more than six months before they had a legal right, under the treaty, to occupy the land of the lead mines. Other immigrants followed the next year, and Dubuque became, in two years, a mining village, and by vote, at a public meeting, received its name. In 1834 the region west of Lake Michigan and north of Illinois and Missouri was attached, for purposes of government, to the Territory of Michigan, and Dubuque county was made to include the whole region west of the river and north of a line due west from Davenport. A few officers were appointed, but there was little administration of justice, in a legal form, until what is now Wisconsin, Iowa and also Minnesota was organized as a separate Territory, under the name of Wisconsin, in 1836. Such was the rapid settlement west of the river that Iowa became a separate Territory in 1838. Dubuque became an incorporated village in 1837, but the population was not yet a thousand in 1840. The first newspaper in Iowa was the "Du Buque Visitor," published May 11th, 1836. Within the first seven years some manufactures had been commenced, including furniture, wagons and lumber. Churches and schools had been established; the state of society had been improved, and the village was ready to become a city.

A movement was made in 1840 to incorporate Dubuque as a city. This was carried into effect in the spring of 1841 by the election of a Mayor and five Aldermen to manage the municipal affairs. The corporate limits then included the single sqaure mile donated to the town by the general government. The lead mining interest was still prosperous; it had built the village, and had already been the means of laying the foundation of a flourishing city. Several brick buildings had already been erected. The West began to recover from the financial crisis of 1837, and metallic lead commanded metallic money in the lead region, then, and for fifteen years afterward. A State constitution was adopted in 1846, and Iowa became a State December 27th 1847.

Want of space will permit only a slight reference to the growth of the city before 1850. Some better hotels and business houses had been constructed; the roads leading to the then thinly settled townships had been improved; the population of the city had increased to over three thousand; the number of steamboats engaged in the trade on the Upper Mississippi had been doubled; Dubuque had became an important receiving point, and about equally important for the shipment of lead, but Galena was still the successful rival for the up river commerce. The Chicago and Galena Railroad had been extended thirty miles. There was still nearly two hundred miles of wagon transit to reach Lake Michigan, and though the prosperity of Dubuque had fairly dawned, it required another decade to secure the success which has since been achieved.

Though many of the enterprising citizens had migrated to California in 1849, the immigration from the eastern states to Iowa, in 1850, and for several years afterward, largely increased the population of both city and county. A number of the prosperous Californians returned in 1852. The limits of the city were extended in that year to its present boundaries. Street improvements were vigorously continued in 1854, by macadamizing a part of Main street. Many business buildings were enlarged and new ones were constructed on better plans. During the five years preceding 1856, Dubuque made more progress as a city than it had done in the previous fifteen years. The population in 1850 had increased from three thousand one hundred and eight, in 1840, to ten thousand eight hundred and thirteen, and in 1856, an enumeration, taken in connection with the school census, showed fifteen thousand nine hundred and fifty-seven inhabitants. In 1856–7 large school houses for the accommodation of six hundred pupils each were erected in three of the five wards.

The prospect of the Illinois Central Railroad reaching Dubuque, as encouraged by the munificent land grant in its aid, in 1850, gave a new stimulus to every enterprise, and especially a speculative interest referring to real estate. That railroad was completed to Dunleith in the summer of 1855, and was properly celebrated in Dubuque. The Dubuque and Pacific Railroad was incorporated and received a large land grant, but the first forty miles of the line was not completed to Earlville, Delaware County, until January, 1857. Earlville then contained only two or three buildings, and the excursion party returned to Dyersville, Dubuque County, to celebrate the event.

The general financial revulsion of 1857, suddenly checked emigration to the West, and partially suspended nearly all kinds of business. Its effects continued through 1858, and the very wet summer of that year rendered many of the common roads impassable, and interfered with the extension of the railroad. Many persons removed from the city; many business houses were closed or suspended; only a few new buildings were erected; stores and dwellings stood tenantless, and a financial gloom seemed to prevail in nearly every department of business. But the year 1859 was more auspicious; business revived, migration from the east was resumed; the railroad had extended facilities to gain the trade of five or six more counties, and the business men roused from despondency, and other energetic citizens, commenced the earnest work for the welfare of Dubuque, which has not since received even a temporary reverse. The city began to assume a metropolitan appearance in fine blocks of business buildings, commodious public halls, and the beginning of the construction of the Custom House, by the general government, for the courts, officers, and the post office.

In this decade the whole country was convulsed by the prospect, the fact, and the effects of the war of the Rebellion. This portion of the northwest, being so far from the scenes of military conflicts, was less disturbed than parts of those States nearer the temporary political border line between "North and South." Dubuque city and county sent three companies to the battle fields, besides about a hundred men who enlisted in the regular army, or regiments from Iowa and other States. The withdrawal of such labor and talent for three months to three years was partially a patriotic sacrifice, at the expense of the material public prosperity. But within a year after the close of the war the city grew more rapidly, as a result of extended trade, increased manufactures and public improvements, additional schools, the organization of new religious and secular societies and the building of new church edifices.

The population in the city in 1860 was thirteen thousand, and including the county, thirty-one thousand one hundred and fifty-four. The census of 1870 indicated a population of thirty eight thousand nine hundred and sixty-nine in the city and county combined, and eighteen thousand two hundred and seventy-nine in the city alone.

The lead mining interest engaged less miners during the war, though the annual product exceeded the value of two hundred thousand dollars. Other exports increased, especially of grain and flour, and of all the animal products, either in bulk or in a form ready for for market.

The wholesale trade continued to be extended westward even beyond the Missouri River, and to the remote settlements of Minnesota. All the leading manufactories increased their business; the agricultural prosperity of the county was greatly augmented after the war, and the mercantile interests of every kind were correspondingly benefited. The street railway was added to the facilities for convenient passenger transit for three miles. Steady progress was made in relation to all the essential elements of a healthy municipal growth up to the commencement of the Centennial decade.

The thirty-eighth year after the permanent settlement of Dubuque, gave a bright promise for the future. At least a fourth of the twenty thousand people over twenty years old, in the city, and about the same proportion in the rest of the county, had either been pioneers before 1840, or early settlers previous to 1850. By this time most of the immigrants of foreign birth were surrounded by families. The native born in the city and county outnumbered those from elsewhere. The churches and schools had increased in number and become well established; railroad transit had been facilitated by the Dubuque and Dunleith bridge; the river trade kept pace with the increase of manufactures, and the growing commerce began to require railroads north and south on the west side of the river; street extensions had been improved to accommodate the citizens who made residences near the corporate limits, and the press, most of the time, maintained a high position, expressing the sentiments and promoting the welfare of a reading and reflecting people.

As still more costly buildings were erected and many of the wooden structures were accidently burned, the efficiency of the fire department was increased by supplying steam engines, readily movable, by horse power, to places of danger.

Iowa, and its chief city, began to recover from the effects of the war, and from year to year, since 1870, new evidences arose within the city and in its trade connections abroad, to show that the central point for contiguous portions of three adjacent States has become an important consideration in relation to five railroads, and also in reference to the increasing river commerce in the central part of the upper Mississippi valley. Perhaps the progress of Dubuque can be best illustrated by a few comparisons as to time, and naming the different branches of business, showing also the fluctuations, incidentally, in relation to the assessed value of real estate and, inferentially, as to the general prosperity for the last twenty-five years, and especially since 1870. Such contrasts show not only the progress but the relative position of each branch of trade referred to. The following figures show, approximately, the average sales for the last five years, in some of the leading branches of business, aggregated respectively, to indicate the increased value of the trade and manufactures:

About twenty merchants sell dry goods to an aggregate amount of over $1,500,000 annually.

Twenty-five grocery houses, most of them in the wholsale line, sell goods to the amount of over $2,000,000.

The sales of the wholesale hardware stores amount to more than $800,000.

The trade in drugs, paints and oils is not generally considered very important, yet this branch of business, three years ago, reached the amount, in sales, of $530,000.

The sales of the wholesale crockery stores, with their retail departments, reach nearly $200,000.

Ten of the wholesale and retail boot and shoe stores sell their goods to an amount exceeding $400,000.

The sales by wholesale tobacco dealers exceed $100,000.

The sales of hats, caps and furs, partly connected with a retail clothing trade, is about $85,000.

Three mercantile houses, in connection with their other trade, sell about $200,000 worth of goods in the "notion line."

The trade of about fifteen clothing and merchant tailoring establishments reaches $750,000 a year.

The dealers in leather, harness and saddlery furnishing sell goods to the amount of $375,000.

Four of the dealers in books and stationery sell, annually, to the amount of about $175,000.

The proceeds of sales from the furniture manufactories amount to more than $200,000.

The trade of the wholesale liquor dealers amount to $350,000, besides the value of liquors shipped from the distilleries.

Six of the dealers in stoves and tinware sell to the amount of $150,000.

The fact may be surprising, but there is more than $300,000 worth of fruit and confectionery sold in Dubuque every year.

The sale of millinery goods reaches nearly $100,000.

One firm sells over $50,000 worth of seeds and agricultural implements. Five or six other dealers in agricultural implements and farm machinery make annual sales amounting to over $300,000.

The trade in powder and shot reaches $150,000.

The produce and commission business is very fluctuating. The aggregate business of five houses in that line is about $300,000.

The receipts of four livery establishments, including the omnibus line, with nearly two hundred horses and one hundred and fifty vehicles, amounts to nearly $100,000 a year.

The trade in musical instruments is nearly $90,000.

The sale in coal exceeds $75,000, and that of wood is more than $200,000.

With the general prosperity the trade of jewelers, picture dealers, photographers, trunk manufacturers and many other branches of business have increased in proportion to those enumerated.

The value of the manufactures of Dubuque have increased from $3,194,000, in 1870, to nearly $5,000,000 in 1876. Among them are the manufacture of steam engines, boilers, threshing machines, castings, and the work of iron foundries and machine shops, coppersmith work, pails and tubs, tobacco, window shades, churns, fanning mills, trunks, soap and candles, flour, wagons and carriages, furniture, planing mill work, products of breweries and distilleries, cooperage, brick, vinegar, and many other trades and branches of business not named.

The press of Dubuque is equally a credit to the city and an honor to the fifteen editors and to the publishers. There are seven newspapers, three of them published daily, with issues weekly. There are also four other papers published weekly, besides several periodicals. All the newspapers have job printing establishments, and there is one extensive office devoted entirely to that business.

There are three good and creditably successful bookbinderies.

The trade in lumber affords a striking contrast, indicating the progress of that and many other branches of business. In 1834 a small raft of pine boards, the first that ever descended the upper Mississippi, furnished the material for a frame addition to a log building used as a boarding house in Dubuque. In 1870 fifty million feet of pine lumber from the forests of Minnesota and Wisconsin were sold to the amount of seven million five hundred thousand dollars from fifteen Dubuque lumber yards. The lumber trade has much increased since that time, and at present there are lumber dealers in several of the county villages.

In 1834 there was only one man engaged in the manufacture of furniture. There are now five or six manufactories, one of them employing about fifty men and the rest, in the aggregate, over a hundred.

Dubuque County did not become self-sustaining in the products of agriculture until about the year 1850, yet the city was a market town to supply young villages from ten to eighty miles distant, in the articles of trade required in the settlement of a new western district. It thus became an important receiving point for goods from the lower Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, a position which it still maintains in 1876.

No city in the Union of equal population has more reason to be proud of its position, character and reputation than Dubuque, as a growth of forty years in developing all the elements of progress which have made the county and city the most populous and wealthy in the State. While Dubuque has not the honor of being an hundred years old, yet its "Centennial Directory" records a few facts of its progress since it became the first city in Iowa, only thirty five years ago. Its twenty-five thousand inhabitants, this year, unite in congratulating each other, and their patriotic friends everywhere, on the anniversary of the natal day of American Independence.

As a matter of history we record briefly a few more particulars in relation to the present condition of the city and county, and in reference to churches, societies, schools and corporate institutions. The county and city has already reached a point of success, in 1876, which warrants the hope and even the assurance that the next year, the next decade, and the next century will find Dubuque a continually flourishing city.

RIVER COMMERCE.

The first steamboat which ascended the Upper Mississippi conveyed government stores to Fort Snelling in 1819. It was nearly fifteen years before the trade along the upper part of the great river was sufficient to encourage a regular steamboat business above St. Louis. Even then, for ten years, it depended on the incidental trade connected with the lead mining interest, especially in that part of the mineral region in Illinois of which Galena was the shipping port. In fact, this trade was the foundation of the first profitable commerce in the mining region. For the past twenty-five years, and especially during the last fifteen, steamboats have arrived or departed from the levee daily during the season of navigation, and it is not uncommon to see to see four or five boats here at the same time, with cargoes of goods for the merchants, and to return southward loaded with agricultural, manufactured or mineral products. The capacious harbor between the island and the main shore, affords winter quarters for steamboats and rafts of lumber. In the season of navigation the shores of the harbor are a convenient storing place for vast quantities of wood and lumber. The river commerce is second only to the important benefits received from the railroads.

RAILROADS.

When Dubuque became a village, there were but a few hundred miles of railroad in the United States. There are now about two hundred stations on three thousand miles of railroads in Iowa. Commercial facilities have been the great civilizing and progressive influences of this century. Though Iowa has on its east and west borders large navigable rivers, as free highways of commerce, the interior prairies would not have been so rapidly settled except by the aid of railroads. The Illinois Central Railroad reached Dunleith in 1855, and gave a new impetus to every industrial enterprise, even a hundred miles west of Dubuque. The Dubuque and Pacific Railroad was commenced in 1856 and extended to Sioux City since 1870, a distance of over three hundred miles, and with the road up the Cedar Valley, is now operated by the Illinois Central Company.

What are known as the river railroads were projected by very discerning men, who had in view the growth of Dubuque and its future railroad commerce. Two railroad companies, now familiarly known as the C., C. & D. R. R. and C., D. & M. R. R., have afforded the commercial facilities which were long needed, especially in winter when the river navigation is closed. These roads form a continuous line, southward to the thriving city of Clinton, there forming a junction with the Chicago Northwestern railroad; and northward a hundred miles connecting with the railroads of Minnesota and Wisconsin. Dubuque will evidently become one of the most important railroad centers in the upper Mississippi valley. The Iowa Pacific line will soon be constructed to bring most of the trade of a dozen more counties to this metropolis. By an act of the last General Assembly the right was granted to change the route of the Dubuque Southwestern road from a point in Jones county to pass by way of Cascade directly to this city. Every railroad movement within a hundred miles tends to the benefit of Dubuque.

COMMERCIAL POSITION.

Physical geography and commercial necessity determine the location of prosperous cities. The banks of navigable rivers at intervals become places for the concentration of trade. Western civilization is advanced by migration on nearly the same parallel of latitude, encouraged by the higher agricultural, climate and sanitary advantages as compared with the Atlantic States. For these reasons the twelve Iowa cities on the right bank of the Mississippi have all grown to an astonishing degree of commercial importance, and some of them within fifteen years. But Dubuque is the first, and from its more fortunate position will continue to be the chief city of the State. It is nearly midway between St. Louis, the great commercial, central metropolis of the Mississippi valley, and St. Paul, an important commercial city at the head of the upper Mississippi navigation. It is also nearly midway between the flourishing Wisconsin and Illinois cities on the west shore of Lake Michigan and the second great commercial river, the Missouri. From that lake to that river the system of railroads is so arranged that probably more of the through lines will concentrate from the west at Dubuque than at any other point within Iowa or Minnesota. A city so situated, and having already attained a growth not exceeded by any rival in the great valley, above St. Louis, will necessarily have a prosperous future.

PROGRESS.

The growth of a city is best shown by the annual increase of the assessed value of real estate, taken for a considerable period of time, regardless of the occasional fluctuations which result from wild speculations.

The village tax for 1838 was only five hundred and twenty four dollars, paid by only ninety-nine persons, including business firms. The tax of 1839 amounted to only six hundred and forty-five dollars, paid by only one hundred and twenty-three business firms and individuals, an average for the two years named of a little over five dollars for each property owner.

But such was the progress of Dubuque after 1840, and especially after 1850, and more so under the inflation of all western speculative interests from 1854 to 1858, that the property within the city was assessed, in 1856, at the value of thirteen million dollars and a tax levied of one-hundred and thirteen thousand dollars. But the values, the assessments, and the taxes were soon afterward greatly reduced throughout the West, and correspondingly in Dubuque. Though the actual value of real estat increased, the city records indicated for 1869 a total value, by assessment, of about six million dollars, and a city tax was levied of about fifty thousand dollars.

In the present year the assessed value is about nine million dollars, and the city tax is less than one hundred thousand dollars.

The importance of Dubuque is also well indicated by the amount paid as internal revenue by the city, and the Third Congressional District in which it is situated. In 1866 the general revenue from Iowa, amounted to two million, six hundred and fifty thousand three hundred and ninety dollars, of which these twelve counties paid nearly as much as the whole of the other eighty five counties then organized. In that year the manufacturing trade, and business of Dubuque city paid to the Government the sum of nine hundred and fifty-six thousand three hundred and thirty-four dollars, or over one-third of the whole revenue tax from the State.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The first school in Iowa was at Dubuque in the winter of 1833–34, maintained by contributions of a few citizens to defray the expense of erecting a log building for that purpose near Seventeenth street, and employing a teacher. During the Territorial government laws were passed authorizing the organization and maintenance of public schools, but it was not until 1844 that a system of schools was adopted in Dubuque. Two small brick buildings were erected, neither scarcely sufficient for eighty pupils. One of them was permitted to be sold under a mechanic's lien, and was not redeemed until after the adoption of the present city free school system in 1856. In 1856–7 the three large buildings known as the first, third and fifth ward schools were erected. Each of them have the capacity to accommodate six hundred pupils. Since that time the fourth ward building and another in the fifth ward has been added to the school property, besides the school buildings at West Dubuque and in the south part of the city. The plan contemplated a High School, from which the pupils of the ward schools might receive further instructions as students, and graduate with the honor of a full course of instruction. The hopes of the friends of free popular education have been realized in the fact that nearly a dozen buildings, occupied by seventy well qualified teachers and nearly three thousand progressive pupils, are an evidence that Dubuque is really awake in relation to its best interests. The value of the school property in the city is over one hundred thousand dollars.

In the other free public schools in the county there are about two hundred teachers instructing seven thousand children in actual, annual attendance. Such facts show the progress of one of the best means of development for the city and county in laying the foundation for the intellectual and moral culture which will continue the progress began here forty years ago, well sustained at present, and will be the principal element of county or city success in the future.

THE LEAD MINING INTEREST.

Though lead mining had been pursued over forty years in Julien Dubuque's mines, it was not until after the permanent settlement of 1832–3 that the mining business became a regular trade between miners, smelters and the merchants who bought the "mineral" in exchange for provisions and other merchandise required by the miners.

This trade increased relatively to the progress of the city, which, in the early days before 1845, depended on the yield of lead ore and its value as a manufactured product.

It may seem anomalous to refer to natural resources pertaining to a city, but the abundance of limestone adapted to most building purposes, accessible on every square mile within and surrounding the corporate limits, and the still more abundant clay for good brick, are included in the natural advantages of Dubuque. Even the forests of oak, maple and other kinds of hard timber within a few miles, in different directions, supply a portion of the fuel required and of material for mechanical uses.

The lead mines, however, within the city and surrounding it within five miles, have been, and are still, a more contributing element of prosperity. The lead district of Dubuque county includes over a hundred square miles. The larger number of very productive mines have been, and are now, worked within the city, or within a mile or two of its limits.

The ore is mostly found in east and west vertical fissures in the limestone, expanding within a certain depth into caves, the latter often partly filled with clay and partially decomposed rock. The ore occurs in continuous sheets or immense masses in such places, or extends irregularly in variable quantity of a hundred or a thousand to millions of pounds, at intervals of a few to several hun dred feet. It seldom occurs in profitable quantity more than one hundred and fifty feet below the surface of the lead-bearing limestone, and mostly within a hundred feet.

The upper rock, over most of this part of the lead region, is slate, so easily decomposed as to be seen in very few natural exposures. The surface is mostly in gentle slopes with many nearly level spaces and moderate depressions terminating in more abrupt ravines near the small streams and the river, where there are rocky bluffs from a few feet high to a hundred or more. The soil is deep, rich and productive, which has made it as attractive as an agricultural and fruit growing district as the underground wealth is to the miners. Many of the valuable lodes near Dubuque, and also in the neighboring counties in Wisconsin and Illinois, have been worked beneath gardens, streets, roads and cultivated fields. The lead product shipped from the Dubuque mines for ten years past has been worth about two hundred and fifty thonsand dollars annually, and did not differ much from that amount annually for over twenty-five years previously. The new discoveries are about as frequent as they were twenty years ago.

Within a few years the use of associated capital has been more extensively employed in mining, and with success. But most of the "prospecting" and mining is still done by parties of two or more men, with a cost, for tools and apparatus, of less than sixty dollars, and upon land leased for the underground right of mining. Many farmers cultivate the surface in summer and work out more profits by mining in winter. This resource is capable of immense development by employing organized capital and the use of suitable machinery, or adit levels, to drain the water from a few localities where large quantities of ore are necessarily inaccessible by the ordinary cheaper methods of partial draining. As the ore is a sulphuret of lead, not soluble in water, the fine copious springs seen occasionally at the base of the bluffs are pure and wholesome. The larger part of the ten million dollars worth of lead produced by these mines has been found in situations requiring no drainage, which is also the case with many of the profitable mines worked at present.

The mines are still as productive as they were thirty or forty years ago, and it only requires the use of more capital and energy, well directed by more scientific labor, to develop the Dubuque lead mines into a profitable business which has yet been scarcely considered by the miners or the owners of the mineral lands.

CORPORATIONS.

Among the many corporations may be named the Gas Company, which has lighted the city about twenty years, as well by street lamps as by good gas light in private residences. About eleven miles of pipe have been laid through the principal streets.

The Water Works Company has been a blessing to the public in supplying the city with pure water from an inexhaustible fountain, conveyed through over ten miles of pipe, furnishing water to a hundred public hydrants for use in extinguishing fires, and for general use in public buildings, hotels and private residences. No city in the West is better supplied with pure water.

The Railroad Bridge Company may be, in one sense, considered a Dubuque corporation. Its cost of $750,000 was, during the time of its construction, a few years ago, a great benefit to the cities of Dubuque and Dunleith.

The Street Railway, of three and a half miles, is a public accommodation highly appreciated. It will soon be extended through other avenues and streets, and in less than ten years, there will, no doubt, be fully ten miles of street railway.

The other private corporations, for pecuniary benefit, number over a dozen, and are alike profitable to the stockholders and to the public at large.

CHURCHES.

The first denominational religion established in Iowa was that of the Methodists, in 1834, at Dubuque. A few citizens contributed the money, with some donations from St. Louis, to erect a small log building, on ground, at that time granted by the Government agent of the lead mines, and now known as Washington Square. The cost was only two hundred and fifty-five dollars, by contract. The building was twenty by twenty six feet in size, one story high, and the spaces between the logs were closed by a mortar of lime and sand. The contract required two windows and a "batten door." This building was used for many years for church, court and school purposes, and also generally for public meetings.

The next form of religion, regularly established, was that of the Catholic church. Mass had been celebrated in 1834 in a private house, and in 1835 the foundation was laid for the first St. Raphael's Cathedral, on the site occupied by the present Cathedral of the same name.

By the year 1840 the Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Episcopalians had organized societies, and before 1850, had well established churches, as did also the Baptist and some other denominations. Twenty churches and religious societies, and as many Sunday schools, well represent the moral element of Dubuque society. Some of the churches are elegant structures, and would be creditable edifices in a city of twice the population. St. Mary's church, built by the German Catholics, cost ninety-seven thousand dollars, and occupies the place of a cornfield only fifteen years before.

HOTELS.

The first, really first class hotel in Dubuque, was the Waples House, of 1844, which, after improvements and extensive additions, has become the Julien House of the present, the largest hotel in the city. There are now five or six more first class hotels, such as the "Lorimier House," the "Key City" and the Tremont." There are at least twenty other good hotels and about fifty good boarding houses. The hotel and boarding house capacity is sufficient for the accommodation of a thousand people. Visiting strangers to Dubuque, whether commercial agents or seeking opportunities for investments in real estate, will find intelligent gentlemen in the office of each of the best hotels ready to give all the information a stranger may require.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS.

In addition to the public schools there have been private institutions of learning since 1835. Some of them have been designated as academies and colleges, and several were devoted to instruction for young men preparatory to the duties of the clergy. The Catholics, Methodist, Presbyterians and Episcopalians have each had such schools. The latter, however, for some time, sustained a seminary for young ladies, named in honor of the venerable Bishop Lee. At present there are a less number of private schools than formerly, the commodious and well conducted public schools supplying their place, and with less expense to the public. There are several schools for young ladies, maintained under the auspices of the Catholic church. One of them is St. Joseph's Academy, a school of long standing and high character.

THE PROFESSIONS.

Few cities of the population of Dubuque have a greater number of professional men of such skill and ability in their respective branches of learning. There are about forty lawyers, nearly thirty physicians, over thirty clergyman, over a dozen artists, a number of surveyors, and a few men whose business is devoted to some specialty in usefulness: as dentists, vetinary surgeons and other occupations.

BANKS.

Dubuque has had many banks and broker's offices since 1837, when the "Miners' Bank" was organized and continued for several years. This institution was the first to issue paper money in Iowa. Banks of paper issue were not popular until after 1850, when a State banking system was adopted. This continued after 1860, with a branch at Dubuque, which gave place to the national banks under the laws of the United States. Three of those national banks are now located in this city, and each doing a large business, under the names of Commercial, First and Second National; the latter was opened in the present year.

The Dubuque County Bank is another very responsible institution, as is also the German Bank. All these banks have the entire confidence of the public, for their affairs are managed by men of high character and good business reputation.

MANUFACTURES.

Each period of ten years has marked a vivid contrast in the growth of the city, and especially in the increase of manufactures. The manufactured products of the first twenty-five years related mostly to articles of immediate necessity. It was not until about 1855 that Dubuque began to export any products of much value, except lead. The immense shipments of agricultural productions had then scarcely commenced. Two or three wagon makers and a few blacksmiths were sufficient to supply all the demand for their work until twenty years ago. Now one extensive wagon manufacturing establishment is the largest in the northwest, and its wagon bears its name through many States and Territories. One carriage manufactory is the third in size in the United States. There are six other manufacturers of wagons, carriages and sleighs, and all doing a prosperous business. One of the important branches of manufactures is that of steam engines and mill machinery, in connection with two extensive foundries.

The brewing interest is one of the commercial benefits of the city, one of the six extensive breweries is exclusively devoted to the manufacture of ales and porter. The others are mostly used for making lager beer.

The manufacture of lumber and its trade requires more capital than any other business. Four large steam saw mills and five or six extensive and well-stocked lumber yards indicate the wonderful progress of this branch of trade. The annual sales amount to more than ten million feet, besides a large trade in sash, doors, blinds, pails, tubs and other forms of wood work from the several special manufactories.

The manufacture of tobacco, boots and shoes, tinware, wire work, harness, saddles, horse collars, clothing and several other branches of business are successfully conducted by those who have made some one of these branches of trade a special business.

WHOLESALE TRADE.

The wholesale trade, in various departments, has increased so largely since the close of the war that over thirty commercial agents are constantly traveling the various routes along which this trade has been extended. Country merchants in Iowa and Minnesota, and even in Western Wisconsin, Nebraska and Dakota, who formerly made their purchases in Chicago or St. Louis, now find it to their advantage to trade in Dubuque. Every article required in the retail trade can be found in some of the five or six large wholesale stores. This trade incidentally connected with another important branch of business, that of commission, has made Dubuque an important ship-

DUNLEITH.

The city of Dunleith did not become even a village until after 1850, though it had been a ferry station for crossing the Mississippi for twenty-five years before. The first ferry had relation to the transportation of lead ore from "Dubuque's mines" as early as 1827, when the smelters on the east side of the river purchased "mineral" from the Fox Indians and the Frenchmen of Dubuque's colony over twenty years after his death.

The first permanent resident of Dunleith was Mr. Jordan, who for many years maintained a canoe ferry to the west shore to accommodate the little trade and the large number of mining explorers from Illinois and Wisconsin, who looked forward to the time when they might have a legal right to occupy the lead mines which had been worked by Julien Dubuque from 1788 to 1810. It was not until after 1830 that even a flat boat was used for ferry purposes. Horse power was used to propel a ferry boat in 1834.

Dubuque became a prosperous village, and even a city, before Dunleith had twenty inhabitants. Even in 1849 it had but one house and a fishing shanty. The Government land grant for the Illinois Central Railroad, in 1850, gave a new impetus to every enterprise in portions of the three adjacent States near Dunleith and Dubuque. Such was the progress of Dunleith in the next five years, that on the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad to this city, in June 1855, there had already been erected more than fifty buildings, some of them substantially constructed of brick.

The large building, long known as the Argyle House, was commenced in that year. The village incorporation was made soon afterward, but it was not until 1865 that Dunleith was incorporated as an Illinois city. Since that time its municipal affairs have been directed by a Mayor and a board of aldermen.

The prosperity of Dunleith, for more than twenty years, is well shown by the number of manufactories and other business houses advertised in the pages of this Directory.

The population is now estimated to exceed fifteen hundred.

The citizens of Dunleith, in their private and public capacity, have contributed largely to the support of a fine public school, now well sustained by five teachers, and nearly four hundred pupils in attendance.

It may be said to the credit of Dunleith that neither as a village or a city, it has never been encumbered with corporate debts.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

PROMINENT MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS.

Rouse & Dean—Iowa Iron Works.

As the quantity of iron used by the people of any nation is an index of the degree of civilization which has been attained, we may refer, with pleasure, and for the credit of Dubuque, that the iron foundries are among the most useful and successful manufacturing establishments in the city. Mr. Hammond Rouse has been known for more than twenty-five years as engaged in the iron business. As a skillful machinist, especially in the manufacture of steam engines, he is not surpassed by any man in Iowa. He was one of those men that would not fail after the financial crisis of 1857, and his forty workmen stood by him then and worked through the winter and were well rewarded by full payment of their salaries in the following year.

Mr. Charles B. Dean became a member of this firm a few years ago, and was selected by Mr. Rouse, as a partner, on account of his peculiar fitness, to manage the financial affairs of this very extensive establishment.

It is scarcely necessary to enumerate the great variety of iron and machine work done by Messrs. Rouse & Dean, including the manufacture of steam engines, of twenty sizes; cornices, iron stairways and fronts, boilers and gratings, iron caps, sills and columns, and all kinds of mill machinery. They employ nearly a hundred men.

All our citizens and a thousand of their customers in the country know that there is not a more responsible firm in Dubuque than Rouse & Dean, nor better men in Iowa in their special line of business.

Novelty Iron Works.

Among the new enterprises of last year was the establishment of the Novelty Iron Works, by a number of capitalists, as a stock company, for the general business of a foundry and extensive machine shops. The officers are:

C. S. Burt, president; G. O. Cowles, secretary and treasurer, and J. L. Dickinson, superintendent. The main building is a hundred and forty feet by fifty in size. The machinery is driven by a powerful steam engine. The grounds include an entire block.

The finest specimens of iron stairs, columns, fence railing, cornices, steam guages, and many other things from these works, seen in Dubuque and elsewhere, are evidences of the high appreciation the public has of the style and quality of all articles in their line of manufacture.

They make a specialty of manufacturing steam engines and all kinds of mill machinery. This firm also deals in shafting, belting, and in fact nearly everything pertaining to machines for manufacturing purposes.

G. H. McDonald & Co.

Messrs. G. H. McDonald & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in dry goods and notions, have been established over five years, during which time, by constant attention to the wants of their patrons, have gained the custom and good will of a large number of the people of this city and county. They buy directly from the manufactures, and, we understand, that in their retail department they propose to sell goods at jobbing prices. A glance at their magnificent store, situated at No. 784 Main street, will satisfy all that they keep pace with the times in having their stock replenished at all times with the latest novelties.

E. A. Giles & Co., Watchmakers and Jewelers.

The above firm is the largest jewelry establishment in Dubuque. The business includes every branch known to the trade, in dealing in diamonds and the finest varieties and best qualities of first class jewelry. In fact, there is nothing in the line of superior jewelry that cannot be furnished by E. A. Giles & Co. This house has been established some years, and occupies the handsome store in the corner of the Bradley Block, No. 695 Main street.

Andrew, Tredway & Sons, Hardware, Etc.

This is one of the oldest of the large hardware houses in the city, having been established by the present members of the firm in 1853. They soon acquired a large trade, which has gradually been increasing for the last eighteen years. The wholesale and retail departments are in No. 488 Main street, and their large iron warehouse is in the rear, fronting on Iowa street.

L. D. Randall & Co.

L. D. Randall & Co. were established in 1846 as wholesale dealers in leather and findings. This is one of the leading houses in the city, occupying one the largest stores at No. 280 Main street, with a total depth of two hundred and fifty-eight feet, with four stories, besides basement. Their specialty is the manufacture of horse collars. They carry the largest stock of any house west of Chicago, and employ about thirty men.

V. J. Williams & Co., Agricultural Machinery.

Mr. Williams, of this firm, has been one of the substantial business men of Dubuque ever since he was known as a part of the firm of Rouse & Williams, iron founders.

He at present occupies the responsible position of County Treasurer. Mr. H. Markell is the active member managing their extensive house at Nos. 136 and 146 Main street.

Klauer & Henney.

Messrs. Klauer & Henney, manufacturers of metallic cornice work, and dealers in stoves and tinware, are located at No. 251 Main Street.

Mr. Henney is the oldest man in this business in the city, having been a resident over twenty years. Their extensive factory and salesrooms occupy four floors, and we can heartily recommend them to the citizens of Dubuque County.

Richmond & Blake, Hats, Caps, Millinery and Straw Goods.

The trade in hats, caps, furs, and millinery goods will be an important branch of commerce as long as our race is progressive and the fashions change.

The styles and quality of the goods sold by this firm need no commendation from an editorial pen. The different ladies and gentlemen, who in turn wait to purchase what they want, are waited upon as soon as any of the polite salesman and lady clerks can attend to them. Such facts are the best advertisement for the house of Richmond & Blake. They have the lead in their line of trade, and judging from the stock of goods displayed and sold, their customers will enable them to keep it. Where the most goods of a certain kind are sold, they can be bought the cheapest, and hence we commend the large wholesale and retail store of Richmond & Blake.

Wemott, Howard & Co.

Our city is well represented in the china, glass and crockery line. The leading house, however, is that of Wemott, Howard & Co., 656 Main street. This firm has no less than thirty-six classes of goods in the respective branches of their trade. Including their wholesale department, this firm occupies seven rooms, 114 by 21 feet in size, and all that space is not too much to accommodate the receiving, repacking and shipment of their goods.

In fact, everything from a brush to a basket, from a bracket to a baby carriage, from a feather duster to a fruit jar, from a pocket knife to a Parian statuette, and from a lantern to lamp goods, can all be found at the establishment of W., H. & Co. On account of the large assortment of goods and their excellent quality, we commend this firm, of ten years' standing, to the patronage of our citizens, and to all those retail dealers in other places, whose trade is connected with that of Dubuque.

A. H. Peaslee, Manufacturer of Ales and Porter.

Mr. Peaslee is no stranger to the business men of Dubuque or to hundreds of other business men in the region north and west from which the trade and travel is one way or another connected with Dubuque. After being successful as a hotel proprietor for some years, he engaged in 1866 in the manufacture of a superior quality of ales and porter. He has been so successful in this that he now has the leading trade in these goods here and along the railroads north and west.

He bought, this year, the large building formerly known as the Continental Hotel, and has fitted it up for his brewing and other business purposes. Few men are equally esteemed, either for faithful discharge of duties, officially, as the Mayor of the city several years ago, and for the honorable dealing which has marked all his business transactions.

Carr, Austin & Co.

This firm has been established some years, and is extensively engaged in the manufacture of sash, doors, blinds, balustrades, stair casing, and everything required in finished wood work. It is the leading manufactory of the kind in the city.

John Butt & Bros.

The above firm is engaged in the manufacture of carriages, wagons and sleighs, at No. 645 Iowa street. The business was first established in 1852 by the father of the present firm. They also do a general blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and repairing business, and as their business is increasing very rapidly, they have commenced the erection of a large factory to increase their facilities. It will be 32x76 feet in size, of brick, three stories high, and a basement.

They are enterprising young men, highly respected, and with their additional trade will soon become better known to the city and their country customers. Indeed, they are already well known to the trade here, and their business is rapidly increasing.

L. B. Tuttle, Carpenter and Builder.

Mr. Tuttle is well known in Dubuque, not only as a jobbing carpenter, but also as a contractor for the construction of houses and other buildings. In this respect he has won public favor by good work and by fulfilling his agreements. His shop is on the corner of Fifth and Iowa streets. To those who want a small or a large job well done, we commend L. B. Tuttle as one of the upright men who will abide by the contract.

Hugh Martin, Wood Dealer.

Mr. Martin has been a wood dealer in Dubuque for the last twelve years, and from the fact that his trade has been increasing from year to year, it may be inferred that he has been a fair dealer, and has furnished his customers with a good quality of fuel. All kinds of the best wood, including hickory, maple, and dry oak, may be found at his yard, adjacent to his office, on the corner of Iowa and Third streets.

McLaughlin & Mulligan.

In this department of our work we desire to call especial attention to that enterprising and go-ahead firm of young men situated at the corner of First and Locust streets, viz.: Messrs. McLaughlin & Mulligan, who are among those who have been brought up to their business, and thus acquired a practical knowledge of the details not to be attained in any other way. They have one of the neatest stores; and in which is kept a carefully and well selected stock of staple and fancy groceries, flour and feed, wines, liquors and cigars. We understand they make a specialty of having constantly on hand fresh butter and eggs for their city customers, and for which they are prepared to pay the highest market price to farmers.

Housekeepers will advance their interest by consulting their advertisement in this work.

The "Blue Store."

Every body in Dubuque knows W. G. Harper of the popular "Blue Store," No. 640, Main Street, where a thousand customers have already learned that they can buy more goods at a cheaper price than can be had at any other store in Dubuque. It was a slight mistake of the printer that his, its and their name is printed in the Directory as "John" instead of W. G., that will not hinder the readers from finding the true "Blue Store," where "John" or W. G., or any other proprietor or clerk will be as ready as ever to wait on all customers, many of whom, especially the ladies, know that the "Blue Store" is the store for retail trade in every thing required for a family, in the provision and grocery line.

W. H. Robison.

Camp Robison is a well known place at No. 544 Main street, where as many boots, shoes and gaiters have been sold in the past fifteen years as at any house of the kind. His business increased so rapidly that he has added a large wholesale department for the benefit of country dealers.

L. T. Hanks.

Dentistry is a science mostly of this century. It is well represented in Dubuque by nearly a dozen skillful operators. Among them, Dr. L. T. Hanks has become deservedly popular for his successful work. His office and rooms are at the northeast corner of Eighth and Locust.

John Harper, Tailor.

To make clothing in good style, with nice fits all the time, is a characteristic of a good tailor. Such a man is Mr. Harper. But he does more than this, here novates old clothing and makes it appear as good as new, and this feature of economy has made his business a benefit to gentlemen and profitable to himself. Remember his place, 461 Main Street.

Organs, Musical Instruments and Jewelry.

It is not often that three men, each well qualified for their special business, are found in the same building, but such is the case at No. 661 Main street, where W. G. Farrar, well known for a long time in the music line, R.

Kohaus, a popular dealer in music and musical instruments, and L. A. Potts, though a more recent citizen, has already established his reputation as a fine engraver and a successful jeweler.

Wood, Coates & Co.

Some of the old merchants of Dubuque have maintained their commercial integrity, and continued their business prosperously. Among such men are Messrs. Wood, Coates, Meredith and Baker, who constitute this firm. The town clock building has become a conspicuous object in our city, and the extensive wholesale and retail dry goods house of Wood, Coates & Co., has rendered it still more attractive.

Josiah Conzett.

Among a hundred or more of retail dealers and general traders in Dubuque, there are few who have built up a better trade, by industry and perseverance, than Mr. Conzett. His line of business includes dry goods, groceries and a great variety of other goods. His fair dealing has made him popular, as his old friends and his new friends know, when they call on him at 1204 Iowa street.

S. S. Sergeant, Artist.

One of the evidences of civilization is an appreciation of artists; especially portrait painters. Mr. Sergeant has quietly and modestly won the favor of our citizens by his faithful delineation of the faces and forms of his many patrons as transferred to enduring canvas, colored to the very life. His studio is in Eagle Block, cor of 9th and Main Streets.

Charles Fockler.

Next to making good hay at the right time is the value of proper instruments for handling it. Among useful agricultural machines of modern invention are Horse Hay Forks, especially that of the Bower's patent. Mr. Fockler is the manufacturer and dealer in this apparatus at No. 46, south Main street.

John. T. Hancock & Co.

One of the oldest and most responsible wholesale dealers in groceries is John T. Hancock. He has been in the business over twenty-five years. He may be considered, with his associates, as having the leading house in his line of business. He receives teas from San Francisco by the car load, and cargoes of sugars and coffees from New Orleans. The capacious stores of this firm occupy Nos. 402 and 416 Main street, cor. 4th.

H. C. Tillinghast.

The business of dealing in hides, skins and tallow is as requisite in a thriving city as any other branch of trade. Mr. Tillinghast has lately established this business in Dubuque, and his increasing trade indicates that he is a correct business man. His office is at 280 Main street.

Northwestern Sanitarium.

Doctors E. A. Guilbert and S. M. Fowler are the proprietors of this new and rapidly becoming a popular institution, as a remedial agency for the cure of diseases and the restoration of health. Dr. Guilbert has been well known in Dubuque for twenty years in his practice as a homœpathic physician. Dr. Fowler has had experience in similar institutions elsewhere. The pharmacy connected with this establishment enables practitioners of this school of medicine to obtain all the remedies they require. The Sanitarium, with its bathing rooms and gymnasium, is located on the corner of 9th and Locust.

C. Baylies' Commercial College.

This institution has long been deservedly popular, not only in Dubuque and Iowa, but in adjacent States, from which students have come to acquire a good commercial education. Some of the best young business men in Dubuque have been educated in this college. This school was a public necessity, and has been successfully managed by Mr. C. Baylies since the death of its founder, Mr. C. Baylies, some years ago. One of its new features, in the present year, was an entertaining and instructive course of free lectures.

J. W. Weller & Co., 99 Cent Store.

As anything not less than a dollar is supposed to have some value, the people of Dubuque and vicinity have learned that for 99 cents they can buy more goods at No. 611 Main street, than they can in some other places for one dollar and two cents. It is not every article in this store that can be bought for 99 cents, for some good things are cheaper, but every customer is sure to find a full dollars' worth for every dollar.

Conclusion.

There are at least twenty-five business men and firms who deserve high commendation for their enterprise. Among them are Skemp & Co., No. 856 Main street, and A. J. Pease, No. 823 Main street, in the dry goods line; T. & E. Reddin, wholesale and retail grocers; Paul Traut & Co., extensive liquor dealers; J. E. Fairbanks & Co., cracker manufacturers; Miss E. Gallagher and Mrs. Rague, fashionable dress and cloak makers; Mrs. Wagner and Mrs. Berg, milliners; Duncan & Waller and McCann & Crawford, loan agents and real estate dealers; H. Heitzelman and F. Jenkel, jewelers; J. H. Lull, insurance agent; H. Ziepprecht, druggist; T. P. Lally, tailor; Jacob Plapp, cooper; Peter Hansen, H. Hoffman, J. M. Dennison, E. Hayes, Nic Jaeger, Nic Weber, saloons; John Kuntz, of the Northwestern Carriage Manufactory; McKenzie & Feyen, wagon makers; and Heer & Naescher and Mullany & Henderson, architects and builders.

C. S. & S. Burt, Manufacturers,—Dunleith.

The growth of Dunleith involved the business necessity of more manufactures. This fact was appreciated by the men who organized the company of C. S. & S. Burt and their associates. This firm manufacture a great variety of machines for mill purposes, especially wood work in relation to bolting, sawing, shingles, road-scrapers, hay and straw cutters, and other work that might be expected from a first-class manufactory. The business of the office is well managed by Mr. R. E. Odell.

Frentress Bros,—Dunleith.

These gentlemen are engaged in the manufacture of an improved style of wire fence. It is a great improvement upon the other forms of fence wire which were partially useful on prairie farms. This kind of fence wire is already highly appreciated by many farmers in Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa.

T. & J. Maguire,—Dunleith.

This firm of the Maguire Brothers are among the leading business men of Dunleith. Their large stock of groceries and extended trade proves that they have by honorable dealing gained a large circle of customers who believe that the Maguire corner, in Dunleith is the proper place to buy all goods they have to sell.

THE DUBUQUE TIMES.

"LARGEST PAPER IN IOWA!"

Twenty years ago the DUBUQUE TIMES sprang into existence, and has pressed steadily onward and upward until it has reached the foremost rank of Iowa journals. It is a large eight-page sheet, and is now confessedly the

"LARGEST DAILY IN IOWA."

That THE TIMES is really the largest in the State does not rest solely upon the testimony of its publishers. We here quote from two of the leading Iowa dailies on this point, whose testimony will not be doubted:

[Council Bluffs Daily Nonpareil.]

The DUBUQUE TIMES IS NOW THE LARGEST, as it has ever been one of the best daily papers in the State.

[Iowa State Register.]

The DUBUQUE TIMES has been changed to eight pages and enlarged. It is now the LARGEST DAILY IN THE STATE.

This advance to the headship of Iowa dailies is in accord with the fitness of things. Dubuque is the largest city in the State, and the country tributary to it is of great extent. Iowa is an overwhelming Republican State, and THE Times being the

its widest and greatest circulation is thus logically attested by this fact, to say nothing of the assurances of its publishers and the reports of postmasters throughout the section named. Add to this Northwestern Illinois, Southwestern Wisconsin and Southeastern Minnesota, and it becomes evident that the DUBUQUE TIMES is "WITHOUT A RIVAL."

The WEEKLY TIMES is also a large eight page sheet, the only one published in Dubuque, brimful of Telegraphic and general news, State and National. It is wide awake, aggressive, ambitious and newsy, and has made greater improvements during the past year than any other paper in Iowa. This year being the Centennial of our National Independence, and is the Presidential year, it will be one of the most eventful since the close of the war, everybody will desire to keep thoroughly posted. It will furnish the latest news of the action of Congress, and will have a resident telegraphic and letter correspondent at Des Moines during the winter to report the proceedings of the General Assembly.

Politically THE TIMES will be the advocate of Republican principles; those which maintain our Union's Integrity and the Country's Honor. It will represent the Centennial idea of free schools, free religion, free press, freedom from monopolies, and equal and exact justice to all. It will strive to perpetuate these principles by aiding in the election of a Republican Centennial President.

MARKET REPORTS.

THE TIMES publishes the best Market Reports of any paper in Iowa: two columns of Dubuque wholesale quotations, with full reports by telegraph from from Liverpool, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Toledo, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis, all of which are compiled with great care, and may be implicitly relied upon.

Having stepped to the front rank of Iowa newspapers, THE TIMES will take no step backwards. Its pre-eminence shall be maintained at no matter what cost. Its coat is off and sleeves rolled up for the Centennial and Presdential year.

DYERSVILLE.

Dyersville is situated on the Illinois Central Railroad, twenty-nine miles from Dubuque city, and on the western boundary of the county. The town, by reason of its location and railroad facilities, has become quite an important shipping point. The citizens, in the majority, are a class of solid, industrious Germans, of whom it may be said there are no better people for the advancement and future prosperity of the place.

The country surrounding Dyersville is rolling prairie, intermixed with considerable quantities of growing timber.

The soil is light, yet of a very wholesome and productive character, east and west, while north and south it is of a black clay loam, the former giving a quick, and the latter a more substantial growth to the cereals; and the populous and well-to-do farming classes find the harvests yielding bountifully to their well directed efforts. The general surroundings are such as to guarantee for all future time a healthful and pleasant location and a prosperous business for Dyersville. The country is well watered, its principal stream being the north branch of the Big Maquoketa, which affords very good water-power for milling purposes.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

The earliest settlement of the town of New Wine by a civilized people dates back to 1837, when Messrs. Crawford, Mouncey, Hewitt and others located claims, and to 1838, when Thomas Riggs and family settled in that neighborhood. The territory on which the town of Dyersville is situated was purchased from the government in 1848, by James Dyer, in whose honor the town was named,

Sturtevant, Dubuque Laundry, 8th, nw cor. Main who commenced the settlement of what is now a thrifty and prosperous town. In 1849 his partner, James Dyer, Sr., and Rev. W. Trick, with their families, came on from Bonwall, Somersetshire, England, and became permanent residents. Other families collected, and in 1853 the town was surveyed by Henry Jennings. In 1854 it was re-surveyed and platted by Samuel Bethel.

In this year Dyersville made remarkable progress, and among other substantial improvements, O. L. Foot built the present Dyersville Hotel, purchased a one half interest in the water power, and in partnership with James Dyer, Jr., erected a grist mill. The Sabbath was observed by public worship, with preaching by the Rev. William Trick, in James Dyer's store, and early in the year 1855, through the instrumentality of Rev. William Trick, the present Methodist church was formed and a house of worship erected.

In 1855 the dark mantle of sorrow overspread the entire community by the loss of many of its enterprising, esteemed and respected citizens, by the ravages of cholera, which broke forth upon their prosperous village in the dark hours of night, on the 20th of June, and so general, instantaneous and fatal was its work, that of the inhabitants who retired well and hearty at night, four were found dead in the morning, six more died within the next twenty-four hours; and for two long months, day and night, could be heard, in all parts of the place, the sound of hammer and saw, preparing coffins for the numerous victims of this terrible malady.

In 1856 the first newspaper was established, the Dyersville "Mercury." Dyersville had scarcely recovered from the stagnation produced by the ravages of cholera, when the crash of 1857–8 came upon it, and found it, like all new towns, unprepared for such a crisis, and it fell. For a long time very little business was done, until in 1863, when it began to improve and has since continued every year to increase in prosperity.

The first frame house was built by George Hyler, and is at present a part of the Pennsylvania House.

In 1872 Dyersville became an incorporated town, and at the March election, in 1873, the following officers were chosen: William Trick, mayor; A. Limback, D. S. Smith, C. C. Chesterman, Andrew Krapfl, August Mauche, trustees; John Morley, recorder; Wm. C. Bagley, marshal.

The present city government is as follows: William Trick, mayor; Henry Holscher, C. C. Chesterman, N. Esch, A. Mulie, D. S. Smith, councilmen; Henry Frieburg, recorder; Jacob Wietenbacher, marshal and street commissioner.

Since its incorporation many improvements, of a public character, have been made, and all from revenue derived from saloon and other licenses. No officers of the town are salaried, except the recorder and marshal, who have fifty dollars each. In 1874 a new iron truss bridge was built at a cost of four thousand five hundred dollars. There are five very fine church edifices, Episcopal, Methodist, German Presbyterian, Roman Catholic and Congregational. The High School building is an elegant structure, erected at a cost of eight thousand dollars.

The "Dyersville Commercial" is a live, newsy sheet, under the editorial management of its energetic proprietor Mr. Jerome Rose. The Commercial has a large and steadily increasing circulation among an enterprising and go-ahead class of people, and is one of the best advertising mediums in this section of the State.

The Job Printing department is supplied with a fine assortment of the latest faces of display type, and they are prepared to turn out first-class work at very moderate prices. Parties living in this section of the country will find it to their interest to patronize the "Commercial."

Among the leading business firms of Dyersville may be mentioned the staunch house of Freiburg & Krapfl, who are among the oldest settlers ; they are dealers in lumber, of which they keep constantly on hand a large and varied assortment to meet the wants of their numerous patrons.

Mr. William McFadden keeps the leading drug establishment, and has in fact, one of the neatest stores to be found west of Chicago ; his stock embraces everything to be found in any well ordered apothecary shop, consisting of pure drugs and medicines, toilet and fancy articles, and a carefully selected stock of wines and liquors for medicinal purposes.

The principal hotel is the Commercial House, kept by John P. Fischbach, and we desire to say in commendation that Mr. Fischbach knows thoroughly how to run a hotel, having everything neat and clean, and the table supplied with a plentitude of good substantial eatibles.

CASCADE.

Cascade has long been one of the most prosperous townships. It was first visited by white men in 1829, by permission of the Fox Indians. This made known to the early settlers the fact of the extensive water power on Maquoketa river, where Cascade village is growing to be a town of considerable importance. The recent project of changing the route of the Dubuque Southwestern Railroad will soon make this a more extensive manufacturing place. It is already attracting more attention than any other town of equal population in the county.

One of the leading manufacturing establishments is that of Messrs. Dickinson & Huntingdon, who manufacture plows, cultivators, wagons, and do a general blacksmithing and repairing business.

John Loes is the proprietor of extensive works for the manufacture of wagons and carriages, and his commodious warerooms are filled with a very large assortment of first-class farm machinery. Those who desire any work done in the line of general blacksmithing will do well to call on the above genial and whole-souled gentleman.

The leading hotel is the American House, carried on by Mr. John Schrade, who has lately refurnished the building throughout, and erected a large stable in the rear for the use of his patrons.

FARLEY.

Farley is situated in Taylor township, on that portion which borders on Dodge, and is twenty-three miles from Dubuque City,

Although for many years it has been almost at a standstill, it is now steadily increasing in importance as a commercial point, lying as it does at the junction of the Iowa Division of the Illinois Central and the Dubuque Southwestern railroads.

Mr. Simeon Clark, the present postmaster, is one of the oldest settlers, having emigrated from Ohio in 1839; when, as he says, they called him a "Buckeye;" he afterwards settled in Illinois, near Springfield the present capital, attended the first court ever held there, which was convened in a log cabin; he was thus entitled to be called a "Sucker," and when in 1834 he moved into Dubuque County, Iowa, became a veritable "Hawkeye."

The town is well laid out, the streets all running at right-angles. There are four churches, Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic. We desire to say a few words in regard to the principal business men of this town who are among that class of live go-ahead citizens who are always a credit to the place in which they reside. Messrs. A. C. Walker & Co., have a very large and commodious establishment, in which they have a carefully selected stock of staple and fancy dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes, hardware, crockery, glass and queensware, and are prepared to sell goods at a very small advance on first cost. Mr. A. C. Walker, and his brother, are gentlemen who are thoroughly posted in all the details of their business; the former having served an apprenticeship in Boston for nine years.

McGee & Armstrong carry on a general merchandise business, and make a specialty of supplying the very best farm machinery. They have been established since 1866, and by their uniform square dealing have gained the confidence of a large circle of patrons.

The leading house in agricultural implements is Fitzpatrick Brothers, whose large and commodious warehouse, situated adjacent to the railroad depot is stocked with an immense assortment of first-class farm machinery, and intending purchasers will find it to their advantage to consult their advertisement in the pages of this work.

REMEDIAL INSTITUTE

TURKISH BATH ESTABLISHMENT.

We call attention to Dr. R. S. Gee's card page T of this work. We are acquainted with the Doctor and his establishment, and know of the marvelous results following his mode of treatment.

As an illustration of what he can do, we quote the following from the Times:

"ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR ONE SHAKE OF THE AGUE.

Dr. Gee of the Turkish Bath Establishment has offered one hundred dollars to any person who can have a shake of Ague in the Turkish Bath."

The third day after a young man by the name of Stewart made his appearance at the Bath shaking for dead set and wished to put the Dr. to the test. "In five minutes" says Mr. Stewart, "the chills left, the shake was at an end, the frigid muscles were thawed out, the whole surface of the body was a scarlet red and the cheeks showed the bloom of youth and health. In twenty minutes the sweat run in streams down the body, and a thrill of pleasure thrilled every avenue of the mind. Thus ended an ague that for six months had baffled all remedial agents; quinine, boneset tea, and ginger bitters included." All acute diseases yield to his treatment as by magic, more especially congestions, and inflammations, contagious, and eruptive diseases.

The Institution is rapidly gaining favor. The Dr. gives the business his personal supervision, and every thing done, that can be brought to bear upon the diseased condition of his patients.

He has accomodations for sixty patients. We advise all the afflicted to consult their interests by spending a few days in his institute. For further particulars address:

DUNLEITH.

The commercial, and other business interests of Dunleith are so nearly identical, or connected with those of Dubuque, that it is very proper to include both cities in the same Gazetteer and Directory. The progress of Dunleith since 1854 has, in relation to the number of inhabitants and their business at that time, been more rapid than that of Dubuque. The following pages contain the names of the leading manufacturers, mercantile houses, and of some other branches of business. Advertisements and editorial notices will be found elsewhere in the Directory. A brief historical sketch of the city, mostly relating to its material progress, will be found in the commencement of this work.

NEW VIENNA.

New Vienna is situated in New Wine township, six miles from Dyersville, and is quite an enterprising little town. It was laid out by Mr. George Meinhart, the present postmaster. The town contains one flour mill, a brewery, two general stores, and a drug store, carried on by Mr. H. E. Miller, who has also lately embarked in the manufacture of a superior article of soda water. Having felt the cooling effects of that effervescent fluid, we cannot help recommending him to the patronage of the general public.

Mr. Joseph Meinhart is a young man who has lately taken charge of the Washington House. His accommodations are first-class, and to all who pass this way we say by all means stop with Joseph and enjoy the pleasurable influences induced by contact with a genial and popular host.
